Right when you walk into Sloan's Ice Cream in Santa Monica, you enter a world of pure imagination. Sloan's invited Girls on Food and a few of our influencer pals in to taste and photograph a few of their favorite icy concoctions.

For this event, guests used #GOFxSloansIceCream for all their social media shares.

We kicked off this event with the Treasure Chest Sundae, a treasure box with a scoop of circus ice cream, hot fudge, gummy bears, sprinkles, whipped cream & a cherry on top. Then we moved on to one of their best-sellers, the Cookiewich, a scoop of homemade ice cream sandwiched between 2 freshly baked chocolate chip cookies. As you can see, this cookiewich was stuffed with chocolate Oreo cheesecake ice cream. So. Incredibly. Good.

The Sandcastle Sundae is the perfect treat for a party of little ones. A real beach sand pail and shovel is filled with 5 scoops of ice cream, hot fudge, caramel, wet walnuts, any 2 dry toppings and a chocolate chip cookie on the bottom with lots of whipped cream and cherries.

The real treat for grown up Instagrammers was the Flower Child Sundae, a real flower pot planted with 3 scoops of ice cream, hot fudge, marshmallow & whipped cream – all buried under fresh Oreo soil. This bad boy was shot until it melted completely and was the star of the day!

If you're ever in Santa Monica and need to chill out, be sure to pop into Sloan's! There's seating near the main shop, or you can go upstairs like we did to take images with their beautiful wall of succulent plants.

Thank you so much to All Points PR and Sloan's Ice Cream for inviting us in! Although this tasting was comped by Sloan's Ice Cream, all thoughts and opinions expressed are my own.
